THE HISTORY OF SCOUTING IN SOUTH GEORGIA
(Appendix Updated on: August 31, 2023)

Chehaw Council Non-Patches Items

	Chehaw Council has a long history of Okefenokee Swamp camping extending into the 1970s. See Okefenokee Appendix for more details on patch and camporee. The neckerchief slide is made of thin leather and has two rivets holding it together on the back. (It was cut on the back and flattened to allow for display and storage).

Opothle Yahola

Opothle Yahola (c. 1798-1862) was a well-respected leader in the Creek Nation both before and after removal. He resisted efforts of the southern states to root out the Creeks and, after the Removal Act, resisted removal. As time passed, however, he came to believe that removal was inevitable and was a signer of the treaty at Washington in 1832. When the so-called "Creek War" of 1836 occurred in resistance to removal, he put his warriors at the disposal of the U. S. Army to help put down the rebellion. He and his followers removed to the Indian Territory in 1836.
